

Civics A

Course Overview

A citizen is a person who is legally recognized by a state and entitled to the state's rights and privileges. Civics is the study of the rights and duties of such a person. One of the best ways to understand your rights and duties as a citizen is to study the government that defines and upholds them. In Civics A, you will learn about politics and government, and you'll analyze democracy which is the system of government used in the United States. Finally, you will examine the legislative, executive, and judicial branches of the U.S. Government. A course in Civics teaches you how to actively participate in governance and how you can help improve the quality of governance at all levels.

Course Goals

By the end of this course, you will be able to do the following:

- Understand the terms power, authority, government, and public goods.
- Know the importance of the rule of law in establishing limits on those who govern and those who are governed.
- Analyze a variety of economic issues, including growth of labor unions and farming issues.
- Compare the U.S. system of government with other political systems.
- Identify different methods of filling public offices at national, state, and local levels.
- Evaluate how the federal government serves the purposes set forth by the U.S. Constitution.
- Describe the processes by which the U.S. Constitution can be changed.
- Explain how certain provisions of the Constitution provide for checks and balances among the three branches of government.
- Analyze the structure of the legislative branch of government, including the role of committees and the procedure for enacting laws.
- Analyze the structure of the executive branch of government, including the constitutional powers of the president and the role of the Cabinet.
- Explain the process for electing the president of the United States.
- Understand the role of the Supreme Court and the structure and jurisdiction of the federal court system.
- Summarize the issues, decisions, and significance of landmark Supreme Court cases.
- Understand the meanings behind a variety of legal terms.

General Skills

To participate in this course, you should be able to perform online research using various search engines and library databases.

For a complete list of general skills that are required for participation in online courses, refer to the Prerequisites section of the Plato Student Orientation document, found at the beginning of this course.

Credit Value

Civics A is a 0.5-credit course.

Civics B

Course Overview

A citizen is a person who is legally recognized by a state and entitled to the state's rights and privileges. Civics is the study of the rights and duties of such a person. One of the best ways to understand your rights and duties is to study the government that defines and upholds them. In Civics B, you will learn how Americans are linked to the government and each other through the media and a number of political parties. You will also take a detailed look at civic responsibility and what it means to be a contributing member of society. Finally, you will study how and why the U.S. creates certain goods and services and you'll see how political and economic decisions made at home can affect foreign policy abroad.

Course Goals

By the end of this course, you will be able to do the following:

- Discuss the role and importance of the media in connecting the public with the government.
- Examine the relationship between local, state, and federal governments.
- Explain the difference between personal and civic responsibilities.
- Analyze the factors that influence an individual's political attitudes.
- Understand the importance of community service, civic improvement, and political activities.
- Compare the U.S. free-enterprise system with other economic systems.
- Explain how people organize economic systems for the production, distribution, and consumption of goods and services.
- Describe the effects of government policies on the free market.
- Evaluate the use of national interest as a criterion for American foreign policy.
- Describe ways in which Americans can influence foreign policy.

Unit 3: Policy and the Citizen

Summary

In this unit, you will study the U.S. economy—how goods and services are created, consumed, and exchanged in the United States. You will investigate the laws of supply and demand, and learn about fluctuating banking regulations and business cycles. You will also explain the idea of national interest and how it relates to the initiation of American foreign policy. Finally, you will see the role that the U.S. plays in the international arena with regard to foreign trade and conflict resolution.

 The U.S. Economy
In this lesson, you will cover the following objectives:
 Explain the characteristics and give examples of command and market economic systems.
 Compare the U.S. free-enterprise system with other economic systems.
 Evaluate U.S. economic policy considering national interests and American values.
 Understand how people organize economic systems for the production, distribution, and consumption of goods and services, and how this addresses the basic economic questions: which goods and services will be produced; how they will be produced; and who will consume them.
 Use economic concepts to explain developments and issues in global, national, or local contexts.
 Understand the characteristics of a market economy and the concepts of scarcity, opportunity cost, trade-off decision making, and supply and demand.
 Understand the relationship between the consumer and the marketplace in the U.S. economic system.
• Describe the influence of the stock market upon individuals and the economy.
• Describe the effects of government policies on the free market.
 Identify laws that protect consumers' rights and avenues of recourse when those rights are violated.
• Apply principles of money management to the preparation of a personal budget that addresses income flow and expenditures such as food, clothing, transportation, health care, and recreation.
